

TASK 2: Prompting for Creativity

Example 1: Startup Marketing Campaign (Eco-Friendly Water Bottle)

Problem:

A startup wants creative marketing content for launching an eco-friendly water bottle.

Prompt Version 1 (Basic):

Write a promotional paragraph about an eco-friendly water bottle.

Typical Output:

The response gives a general product description focusing on sustainability and reusability but lacks emotional appeal and distinct tone.

Prompt Version 2 (Structured Creative Prompt):

Write a 150-word promotional launch copy for an eco-friendly stainless steel water bottle.

Target audience: college students. Tone: energetic and inspiring. Include one slogan and one emotional appeal.

Improved Output:

The response includes a catchy slogan, energetic tone, audience-focused language, and emotional connection to sustainability.

Prompt Version 3 (Few-Shot Prompting):

Example Style:

"Don't just drink water. Drink purpose."

"Small choices. Big impact."

Now create a creative promotional copy for the eco-friendly bottle in a bold, minimalist style. Include one punchline and strong call-to-action.

Few-Shot Output:

The response becomes sharper, slogan-driven, emotionally compelling, and stylistically aligned with the provided examples.

Comparison & Analysis:

Version 1 is generic and predictable.

Version 2 improves clarity, audience targeting, and emotional appeal.

Version 3 shows strong stylistic control and higher creativity due to example-driven guidance.

Example 2: Social Awareness Campaign (Reducing Social Media Addiction)

Problem:

A college wants a creative awareness campaign to reduce excessive social media usage among students.

Prompt Version 1 (Basic):

Write a message about reducing social media addiction.

Typical Output:

The output provides general advice about limiting screen time but lacks emotional depth or persuasive power.

Prompt Version 2 (Structured Creative Prompt):

Write a persuasive 200-word awareness message for college students about reducing social media addiction.

Tone: serious but motivating. Include one relatable scenario and one actionable step.

Improved Output:

The response includes a realistic scenario, motivational tone, and a clear behavioral recommendation.

Prompt Version 3 (Few-Shot Prompting):

Example Style:

"You check your phone for five minutes. An hour disappears."

"Attention is currency. Spend it wisely."

Now write a powerful awareness message in the same reflective and impactful style.

Keep it concise and emotionally strong.

Few-Shot Output:

The output becomes more dramatic, reflective, and psychologically impactful, demonstrating stylistic alignment with the examples.

Comparison & Analysis:

Version 1 is surface-level.

Version 2 introduces structure and persuasion.

Version 3 significantly increases creativity and emotional intensity through few-shot style control.
